

I was living in Minneapolis when the FCC deregulated radio. Prior to deregulation, Minneapolis had a wonderful selection of diverse radio programming. As soon as the industry was deregulated a large corporation bought all the local stations and completely homogenized the airwaves. After that, the only thing worth listening to was NPR and the local college stations. PLEASE don't let this happen to all of our media!!!